BIO

Paul is a transactional real estate attorney with extensive experience in leasing, acquisitions, dispositions, financing and development. His current practice includes representation of multiple developers and homebuilders in the Colorado single family home industry. Paul also represents a variety of landlords and tenants in office and industrial leasing, along with national retailers in negotiating shopping center leases. Paul has worked closely with clients as varied as national REITs, traditional and non-traditional lenders, wind and solar energy companies, and craft distillers and brewers on their real estate needs. Prior to joining the firm as a shareholder, Paul practiced for eight years with a large Denver law firm. Prior to that, Paul practiced real estate law for six years in the San Francisco Bay area, with both a large international law firm and a leading real estate boutique.

Recent transactions include the acquisition and sale of over $100 million worth of Colorado land for residential builders and developers, negotiation of large build-to-suit data centers in Silicon Valley, representation of a mid-sized Colorado company in its acquisition by a publically-traded company, and assisting a craft distiller in expansion in multiple states, including Colorado.
